

DJO Incorporated Receives Accreditation from the Accreditation Commission for Health Care, Inc.

SAN DIEGO, Aug 20, 2007 (BUSINESS WIRE) --

DJO Incorporated (NYSE:DJO), a global provider of products and services that promote musculoskeletal and vascular health, today announced that it has received accreditation status by the Accreditation Commission for Health Care, Inc. (ACHC).

ACHC, a private, not-for-profit corporation, which is certified to ISO 9001 and 2000 standards, was developed by home care and community-based providers to help companies improve their business operations and the quality of patient care. Referring to the value of accreditation, ACHC President Tom Cesar said, "The survey process leads organizations to examine internal policies and practices continually to clarify strengths and improve weaknesses."

Accreditation is a voluntary activity where healthcare organizations submit to peer review of their internal policies, processes and patient care delivery against national standards. By attaining accreditation, DJO has demonstrated its commitment to maintaining a higher level of competency and excellence in its products, services and customer satisfaction.

In order to participate in the Medicare Competitive Bidding Program, suppliers must meet quality standards and be accredited by a CMS-approved accreditation organization, such as ACHC. Additionally, CMS will require suppliers to be accredited in order to receive Medicare Part B payments and to retain a supplier billing number.

"We are proud to be among the organizations to receive accreditation from ACHC," said Les Cross, President and CEO of DJO. "Our accreditation reflects DJO's culture of continuous improvement throughout the organization, from new product development, to manufacturing and customer service. Accreditation is also the culmination of many months of preparation and hard work on the part of many employees at DJO."
